

In Mommy's Eyes

you are my whole world
you have no name but Mommy you and I are one

I glow in your eyes
no border separates us I'm still inside you

your face delights me I see me in your eyes' gleam your smile is my joy

not-me is just you I want nothing else but you
you give me myself

now is eternal
here is only you and me love is all there is

Photo: Jakie in love (look closely at Mommy's face reflected in his eyes)

Photo credit: Sara Scott

Interpretation: In object relations theory, ego begins to form from the moment of birth when the newborn attempts to relate to the world. Mother's breast, then face, are the first external objects to be known.

4 August 2021

dandana.us/poems