

Good Enough

Amid those bigger, stronger, faster, smarter, more, the boy grew into a man. The bar remained forever just out of reach. He tired, but persisted, never giving up, never winning. The race has been run. He finished mid-pack. At long last, he concedes. He is good enough—and always was.

1952

26 April 2026

dandana.us/micros